Oaklands Park
HOTEL

A Royal Story, still unfolding

Originally the site of a Tudor Palace commissioned by Henry VIII in 1538, the Oatlands Estate has welcomed Kings and Queens, Emperors and Earls, Dukes and Duchesses across the centuries.

Though the Palace was ultimately lost to fire, Oatlands endured — and the hotel you see today was built at the turn of the 18th century. It remains a place where heritage and hospitality meet in timeless elegance.

The great Cedar tree at the front of the hotel was planted circa 1645 to commemorate the birth of the youngest son of King Charles I who was known as Henry of Oatlands.

1538

A Tudor Palace

The estate's royal legacy begins with Henry VIII's commission and centuries of history to follow.

18TH CENTURY

A new chapter

The hotel stands as a refined Surrey landmark, shaped by generations of guests and celebrations.

TODAY

Timeless hospitality

A destination for weddings, dining and events — with modern comfort set within historic character.
